

Answer on Question #65559 - Biology / Molecular Biology

1. Which of the following is an accurate negative result for a simple analytical reaction for biomolecules?

- A. starch reaction: dark blue-black solution
- B. peptide bond reaction: purple solution
- C. reducing sugar reaction: orange precipitate
- D. lipid: a single, red fraction (layer)
- E. None of the above is correct.

Answer:

- E. None of the above is correct.