

Answer on Question #44648 – Chemistry - Physical Chemistry

Which is more stronger, ionic or covalent bond? Why?

Answer:

The binding energy is the energy that must be expended to 1 mole of a substance to break all chemical bonds. So it is necessary to compare the specific substance, and not the types of chemical bonds. Bond energy depends on the atomic radii.