

The right answer is d. answer not contain in a,b and c because if the optimal choice for this customer has only one good, this good is much more preferable for the customer and his marginal rate of substitution is high. So, he chooses to buy only one products with higher utility.