

Answer on Question # 71353, Economics / Microeconomics

Consequently, with the increase in the price of maize, the demand for corn decreases, and in turn the demand for wheat increases, which contributes to an increase in the supply of wheat. Therefore, wheat prices will decrease, and the quantity will increase.

