Distributional pattern of industries in India does not provide requisite basis for division of the country into distinct Industrial regions. How?

Industrial distribution depends on raw material availability, infrastructure, markets, and finance. Thus, most of the industries are either overconcentrated in particular regions or do not exist at all. Industrial regions in India are not completely bestowed with specific resources, and the country does not make any efforts to change the situation. Consequently, India lacks a requisite basis for further division into distinct Industrial regions.
