

Answer on Question#38652 – Math - Other

The recognition problem for context-free languages can be reduced to the membership problem for semi-extended regular expressions. So a language denoted by a semi-extended regular expression which is regular expression with the additional operation of intersection of regular expressions is context-free.

Answer: B.