

Answer on Question 38918, Physics, Electromagnetism When an object that was neutral becomes charged the total charge of the universe does not change, as the charge of an another object that gives charge to the first one becomes at the same amount less then it was. Hence, total charge in Universe is all time the same and is assumed to be zero.