

In case you don't know the memory amount the program needs, dynamic allocation of memory should be used.

Thus, instead of static memory allocation:

```
int array[10];
```

you should use dynamic allocation:

```
int *array = NULL;
array = malloc(n*sizeof(int));
```

where n is size of an array determined while executing the program.